Hasta luego Torrevieja

A month in Torrevieja, Spain really opened up my eyes. I've been to Spain two times before this trip but this time things were totally different. I was here, all by myself, no parents and all of my friends back home in Finland. My first actual vacation/worktrip where it's just me. Well yes my brother moved here and I spend a whole lot of time with him but still. This was totally different than any other trip before. The crazy thing is, every morning I woke up and went to work it didn't feel like working. I was super happy and excited every single morning. So here you go, take a look on my trip to Spain.

Helsinki-Vantaa airport

The day we left to Spain was full of happiness. I had a nightshift the same night we had our flight, from 23 till 04 and the plane left at 7am. Someone might think I would've been super tired and exhausted but all I could think was "WOW only few more hours". We caught the same plane with my brother which made the whole leaving part so much easier and so much more fun. We got ourselves a bottle of champagne at the airport and started enjoying the day.

Alicante airport

After 6 hours of flying we made it to Alicante airport where we got ourselves a taxi to Torrevieja. The excitement started to rise even more and I couldn't stop smiling. The exact second I opened up the door to the apartment we (my brother and I) would spend the next month of our lives in I was happier than ever before. I didn't even unpack we just threw our stuff on the floor, checked out the apartment and went out to eat. The whole day was crazy.

First day at the office

I started working right the next day. I came to the office at 8am, had a quick talk with everyone at the office and talked a bit of what I'm going to be doing the next month. First few day went by just taking photos of the office and people working here.

Basically my job was to take care of the socialmedia. Instagram, Facebook etc all together. First I did advertisements to Facebook and Instagram to let people know that we're opening a whole new office, that's right, I had the chance to create a whole new socialmedia account for Bookers.

Bookers is a 100% finnish company that opened up a second office in Torrevieja. Sure it made my trip a bit easier cuz of the fact that everyone at the office is finnish but it sure as hell was still totally different than working in Finland.

First day went by without even noticing the hours spent at the office. I was so happy to finally being able to work in a place where working doesn't feel like working. I mean I've done days from 7am till 5pm, 10am till 1pm, 8am till 2pm in different jobs but damn I could spend a whole day in here, without a doubt.

First work week DONE!

First week had passed and it was time for a little party. We headed over to a few clubs and had a BLAST! No pictures from that night tho cuz.. well.. you know. A night at a club here in Torrevieja was totally different than in Finland. The club is open from 8pm till 8am so it was a long night hahah.

Back to working. The first week went by really fast and I was super happy with the things I had accomplished in such a short time. I opened up a new Facebook-and Instagram account for Bookers Spain and loaded up a bunch of pictures and advertisements on both of them. I was HAPPY!

Day off

Every weekend went by having fun and finding out what Torrevieja had to offer. Me and my brother went everywhere. It never got boring. Seeing new things and eating at different places is a money well spent.

4 weeks has passed...

A whole month has passed and I couldn't be happier of how it went. I've been having mixed feelings whether I'm more happy to get back home or if I'm more bummed to leave. The last month has been amazing and it's definitely not gonna be the last time I'll come here. Super glad I had the opportunity to be here and learn and see new things. Thank you Torre Vieja. See you soon.
